While we're not exactly sure how deep you can take them, they're definitely rated for swimming. You can rest assured knowing that they're built to withstand virtually any realistic thing you throw at them. Our pair lasted for roughly 7 hours and 30 minutes before completely turning off. They're fully capable of up to 90 feet of range - and they boast some other sweet features too! Secondly, the inclusion of micro-USB is a bit comical. If you're in a cold environment, don't expect 7 hours of battery life. However, avoid dropping them from heights or handling them too-rough. Browsing on Amazon, you may have come across the Enacfire F1's. That is why today, we are going to be talking about Lypertek, an up and coming audio brand and [...]best wireless earbuds, sennheiser momentum true wireless earbuds, sennheiser wireless earbuds, sennheiser momentum true wireless earbuds, sennheiser wireless earbuds, sennheiser momentum true wireless earbuds, sennheiser momentum true wireless earbuds, sennheiser wireless earbuds, sennheiser wireless earbuds, sennheiser momentum true wireless earbuds, sennheiser wireless earb earbuds craze, it's very pleasant to see Sennheiser hop on the bandwagon. On the front is a small rubber flap that reveals a micro USB and USB-A charging port. Additionally, they're packed with a wide multitude of features is the ability to use the charging case as a portable power bank. They've included 3 different-sized pairs - small, medium and large. Simply put, this is still downright impressive in our opinion. Being an established audio brand with a variety of products under their belt, - including home and TV audio, wired and wireless microphones, and headphones - it's definitely exciting to see them show us what [...] Moving forward, looking at the F1's, you'll see a much more useful design that Enacfire implemented when creating them. To skip tracks, touch for 2 seconds. To answer a phone call, tap once. We found that the default tips that were pre-installed (medium sized) fit perfectly in our ears. Was this helpful? Today, we are going to [...]best true wireless earbuds, best wireless earbuds, best wireless earbuds review, soundmagic review, soundmagic tws50, soun very diverse. Even if 7 hours is the actual battery lifespan for the pair of buds, that's still great! Additionally, it's much better than most other earbuds in this price-range. In fact, we achieved 6 full recharges on both earbuds before we needed to plug the case in. To put it simply, we found both models to perform adequately and recommended both to our readers. They're compact, comfortable and simple to use. These "in-ear" earbuds are sleek in appearance and boast touch controls for operating your music on the fly. Touch Controls Taking a glance at the Enacfire F1's, you'll likely notice that there are no physical buttons on the outside of the earbuds. This means you could likely go multiple weeks without needing to charge the actual case. It's a more affordable pair which is great [...]best wireless earbuds, best wireless earbuds review, lypertek tevi, lypert possible offering. With Sennheiser though, that is definitely not the case with their track record of 75 years in the industry. You can plug in any device (like your smartphone) to the USB-A input and it'll act as a power bank to charge-up anything. Even just 5 years ago, they weren't nearly as popular as they are today. That was not the case with Microsoft though who took their own sweet time in releasing this pair; the Microsoft Surface Earbuds. The value they provide is excellent - there is really no debating that. Because of this, we decided that we needed to get our hands on them for ourselves. While it will take away available power for charging-up the earbuds, it's great to use in a pinch if your smartphone is running low and needs a little extra juice to get through the day. Today, we're going to be looking at a magical pair (pun intended!) with the SoundMagic TWS50. Comfort and Fit Opening the box for the first time, you'll want to achieve a secure fit right from the start. It's 2020 - time to get with the program! Final Thoughts The Enacfire F1 True Wireless Earbuds have a whole lot of great things going for them. After all, it's really what you're buying them for. As far as usability with the charging case goes, we're pretty impressed. Although we never truly achieved a full 8 hours, they can get pretty close to this estimate. The earbuds on the other hand, are advertised to have an 8 hour battery life. If you'd like to pause your music, double-tap the right earbud. Instead, "touch controls" were implemented. Right above that, you'll see three small LEDs that indicate the battery status. First, the range is limited to about 30 feet. But we are here to tell you that no - there's more to explore. They're hermetically sealed in all regards so that water, sweat, mud and small particles never pose a problem. They're often available as a "lightning deal" for a generously discounted price. Given the fact that Bluetooth technology has improved vastly over the last few years, it's easy to see why. Let's take a look at each feature and truly see what they have to offer. Through normal volume (about 50%) and consistent music-listening, we were greeted with a "low battery" warning at about 7 hours each time we drained them down to their lowest level. The clarity is fantastic since highs, mids and lows all sound right-on. Overall, we like the touch controls but the lack of physical controls can be a nuisance for some. Second, it keeps the earbud batteries topped off and ready for listening at a moments notice. Charging Case A lot of earbuds these days include a charging case. The case itself is compact and not bulky in any sense. As long as you don't turn the volume up near its limit, we'd say you'd likely be happy with the overall sound quality. Perfect! The tip goes into your ear canal while the body of the earbud rests nicely within the cartilage of your ear - no hooks or band required. Cold is a known enemy of small integrated batteries like the ones that the F1 utilizes. Can they live up to the hype, or do they simply fall short? It's definitely a good addition and offers a few benefits. Today, we are going to be looking at the Audio-Technica ATH-CKS5TW (there's got to be a better way of naming these) and ultimately - what they're made of. They're sealed but not equipped for shock-proofing. Keep in mind, however, that some factors may drastically effect the battery life/levels. Take a second and look through the included ear tips. The clamshell design folds open and each earbud has a place to lay. Whether you're listening to music, taking a phone call or watching a movie with them, we must say, the Enacfire F1's seem to deliver. Micro USB is outdated - it's time for manufacturers to start using USB-C. Sound Quality Likely the most important aspect of any earbuds is the sound quality. On the outside, you'll find a nice leather-like vinyl finish on the top and a rigid plastic chassis. The lid securely stays closed as do each earbud when they're properly installed thanks to the use of tiny magnets. They perform quite well in most regards, although we did have a couple qualms about the wireless range and the use of micro USB. With the use of a single finger, you're able to tap the outside of each earbud to command different functions. Wireless earbuds are now the gold standard for music listening. First Look The Enacfire F1's are not the first Enacfire brand earbuds we've tried in the past. If you require a pair of earbuds with a much improved wireless range, be sure to take a look at the TaoTronics SoundLiberty 79. Learn more. The technology has improved so much to the point that there are literally thousands of different makes/models to choose from. Battery Life As we previously mentioned, the charging case can hold around 5 or 6 charges before needing topped off. Both earbuds appear to be as small as possible and include a charging case. Also, playing music at a higher volume will certainly have a negative effect on the batteries. The overall durability is quite impressive and likely suitable for any application. Durability Given that the Enacfire F1's boast IPX8 waterproofing, it's obvious that these were made to easily withstand the elements. This is quite long, however, so we knew we needed to see if this was true. No matter what genre of music we used them with, we found good results. This means, the moment you move too far from your paired device, you'll experience laggy transmission or a complete drop in the connection. Additionally, they have outstanding battery-power and emit high quality tunes right from the box, with no tweaking. First, it gives you somewhere to securely store them while they're not in use. Swap each one out and make sure the ones you choose are snug yet do not create any pressure points. All in all, we wouldn't hesitate to recommend them to anyone looking for an affordable, well-rounded pair of true wireless earbuds. In fact, IPX8 means that they're completely sealed from dirt and water ingress and can handle full submersion in depths over 1 meter deep. These aren't going to be on the same playing-field as a $300 pair of true wireless earbuds, but they'll definitely achieve promising sound quality for those on a budget. Luckily, you can always control your music from the smartphone that's paired with them. The bass became a bit crackling and the vocals didn't seem to be quite as crisp. When placing each earbud within the ear canal, they offer no movement and almost feel the same as a snug earplug. With the volume turned to above 85%, you'll begin to notice a tiny bit of distortion and unfavorable sounds. Please consider sharing: Note: At no extra cost to you, we may earn a commission for purchases using our links. More functions are available, but these are the main ones that will get you started. Potential Downsides Although the Enacfire F1's have a whole lot going for them, we found a couple things about them. Most wireless earbuds these days max out at around 50 feet, so the limited range might be a deal-breaker for some. In fact, last year we reviewed their older model, the CF8003 in 2018. Of course with any electronic device, we would advise against purposely putting them in harms way. While this may not make much difference to some, we'd love to see a standardized USB-C charging capability included.
